GRIN Verlag Jun 2014, 2014. Taschenbuch. Book Condition: Neu. 211x151x6 mm. This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Research Paper from the year 2014 in the subject Design (Industry, Graphics, Fashion), grade: 1.15, Central Queensland University, course: Brand Image Design, language: English, comment: Grade has been converted from Australian (38/40) to German (1.15) , abstract: There are nearly 4,000 colleges and universities in the United States and almost all of these institutions have continued to attract enough students to remain operational year after year, according to Author and Marketing guru Roger Dooley (2013). That s about to change, and one of the key differences in who survives won t be the academic output of the faculty or the amenities available to students. It will be a factor seemingly unrelated to the schools mission: branding. (Dooley, 2013) Nurko (2010) says that branding is a vital tool for Universities to consider as they not only seek to attract the brightest students, but they also seek to attract and retain top academic faculty talent, become centres for research grants as well as attract investment funding and endowments to subsidize future growth . The days when Universities were simply hallowed halls of academia around the world are gone. Today, Universities are not only academic institutes but they are commercial organisations and engines of economic growth for their communities and shareholders. Universities compete for talent at both the student level, but also for faculty personnel and investment funding. Both private and public Universities are more accountable for their balance sheets, as well as for their level of academic rigour and reputation. In a world in which academia, commerce and government overlap, the role higher education plays has never been more critical yet, at the same time more controversial. For this...
